PROJECT MANAGEMENT AND CLAIM AVOIDANCE

One of the Construction & Design Group's primary goals is prompt and efficient problem solving, because no client is interested in sponsoring or defending unnecessary claims. Time is much more valuable when it is spent on productive matters that do not require attorney involvement.

In addition to early contracting and negotiation services, we also advise clients on issues relating to project management and other administrative matters throughout a project. Hill Ward Henderson attorneys work closely with construction and design executives and project managers to ensure proper documentation and handling of all work, activities, claims, and other issues which often arise during any type of project.

We prioritize efforts to avoid claims and litigation to the extent possible. We protect our clients' interests with that goal in mind, and we partner with decision-makers to resolve issues such as licensing, scheduling, claims analysis, and contract termination, as well as issues involving construction lenders and sureties.

When claims or disputes cannot be avoided, our Construction & Design attorneys are prepared to handle all such matters efficiently, effectively, and in the best interest of our clients.

We handle these matters for private developers, government agencies, architects, engineers, design-builders, homebuilders, construction managers, general contractors, subcontractors and suppliers.
