Justin Wallace's practice primarily involves federal and state tax planning for business transactions, including the tax consequences arising from formation, operation, ownership, and sale of C corporations, S corporations, partnerships, and limited liability companies. Justin also works closely with developers and investors in real estate transactions, including investments in qualified opportunity zones. He also engages in general business and corporate matters.

During law school at the Florida State University, Justin was a judicial intern for Chief Justice Ricky Polston of the Florida Supreme Court. After graduating from law school, Justin obtained his LL.M. in Taxation from New York University School of Law, where he received the Dean's Merit Scholarship.

Outside the office, Justin enjoys fishing and watching sports, especially UCF and FSU football.
