Jason Lambert is a Florida licensed attorney, Board Certified in Construction Law, who focuses his practice on representing and advising contractors, subcontractors, and material suppliers in the construction industry throughout the state of Florida. Before law school, Jason spent a decade working in the construction industry, primarily as a project manager and operations director for both new construction and remodeling. He also has experience in the wholesale and retail electrical, flooring, and countertop industries.

Now, as an attorney, Jason represents the same types of companies he worked for and with for many years. His work includes assisting clients with contractor licensing applications and complaints, helping clients resolve payment disputes and construction liens, addressing defective work claims, and drafting and implementing new contracts and procedures to prevent problems from recurring.

In addition to his clients, Jason is also dedicated to improving and empowering the construction industry as a whole. He is past president of the Tampa Bay Area Chapter for the National Association of the Remodeling Industry and is also on the board of directors for Habitat for Humanity of Hillsborough County. He is also a member of the Electrical Council of Florida. Jason previously served as a Sixth Circuit representative to the Florida Bar Young Lawyers Division Board of Governors and as president of the Clearwater Bar Association Young Lawyers Division. In addition, Jason is a licensed continuing education provider for contractors and electrical contractors, and he is the creator and chief articles and content contributor of Hammer & Gavel (www.hammerngavel.com), a blog that is dedicated to informing and
